Aliens?!

O'ahu Invasive Species Workshop

Part of the Eco-Literacy Series at the ProtoHUB

Wednesday, February 25, 6:00-8:30pm

Cost: Free with RSVP; $5 door

Location: ProtoHUB, 458 Keawe St. (Kaka'ako)

Ever wonder what those...things... are hanging from all the trees in Town? (Hint: yes, they are related to aliens.)

Hawai'i has been called the "Threatened and Endangered Species Capital of the Planet". Erin Bishop of the O'ahu Invasive Species Committee and Michelle Gorham Jones of the Hawai'i Department of Land and Natural Resources Division of Forestry and Wildlife will speak to local efforts to manage problematic, non-native invaders.

The Eco-Literacy Series at the HUB is 4 workshops designed to provide those who feel overwhelmed by environmental issues with some basic, academic Ecology to ground local and global problems. Whether you're an environmental professional, a tree-hugging Greenie, or a newbie to the Ecology space, this series will provide you with some good foundational concepts – without being judgmental or preachy.
