meet the 'elepaio

- The Hawai'i 'elepaio is also called chasiempis sandwichensis by people who study birds.
- They live on Hawai'i island and nowhere else in the world!
- They are chestnut brown with white and black markings and a black bill.
- The 'elepaio are early risers! They are the first ones up in the morning and start their day singing. They are also the last birds to go to sleep at night.
- 'Elepaio like to whistle, chatter, and call, but they are best known for their song which sounds like e-le-PAI-o, e-le-PAI-o.
