Linoleum Rugs

Linoleum rugs were a fashionable addition that dressed up the vernacular plantation Residence plank flooring. These rugs could easily be rolled up and transported. They had borders that framed the central imagery. It is possible that these Residence items were acquired as a Fujino Store purchase. It is likely that these linoleum rugs were installed in 1939, as 1939 Japanese and English newspapers were found placed under the linoleum rugs to help level the floor.

People Fujino Family

Matsujiro Fujino was born in Chugoku region, city of Hiroshima, Japan in 1881. He immigrated to Hawaii on February 8, 1906 aboard the Doric. The steerage passenger manifest lists him as a 24-year-old, unmarried farm laborer headed to Honoka'a (Passenger Lists of Vessels 1900-1954). Matsujiro, like so many before him signed a three-year contract to work on the Honoka'a Sugar Plantation.

The youngest daughter, Sachiko, married Yukio Ishihara who was employed at the Ujiki Store. She worked in the Fujino Store until it closed in 1957. She then worked as a cafeteria worker at Honoka'a School. As of this writing only Sachiko is still alive (Joyce Kotake-Seo, personal communication with Wendy Tolleson via e-mail, December 8, 2015).

Conclusion

The Matsujiro Fujino Property meets the Registration Requirements set forth in the Historical and Architectural Resources of Honoka'a Town, Pa'alaea 1 & 2 Ahupua'a, Hāmākua District, Hawai'i Island, Hawai'i Multiple Property Submission.

The Fujino Property is eligible for the Hawai'i and National Registers of Historic Places at the Local Level under Criterion A and Criterion C due to its continuous significance in small town commerce and its period architecture.

The Period of Significance begins in 1925, as first shown in the County of Hawai'i Field Book plot plan stating the construction date of the building, and continues through 1957 with the closing of the Fujino Store.

Criterion A (History and Events)

Under Criterion A (History/Events), the Matsujiro Fujino Building Property is significant at the Local Level under Criterion A, as the structures typify the hard work of immigrants to improve their economic status. Matsujiro Fujino arrived in Hawai'i in 1906 and worked on the Honoka'a Plantation as a laborer. After completing his three-year plantation contract, he linked with Manki Harunaga to promote the Honoka'a Theatre, as well as sell coffins, to finally become an independent businessman constructing his own Fujino Store and Residence in 1925.

The Fujino Building Property conveys its sense of historic character through structural and associative integrity, and it has documented historical significance within the contexts of the development of Honoka'a. It is representative of the development of small "Mom and Pop" businesses and specialty services outside the plantation hegemony. The community benefited from these independent businesses, their policy of "all comers welcomed," and the resulting social integration. Customers benefited from the increased range of goods available. The Fujino Store is a good example of a general merchandise store which featured goods such as coffins and modest luxury items not found in other stores in Honoka'a.

Criterion C (Architecture)

Under Criterion C (Architecture), The Matsujiro Fujino Building Property is significant at the Local Level under Criterion C as a good example of plantation era architecture, a wood Commercial and Residential building constructed in Hawai'i during the opening decades of the twentieth century. The Fujino Building Property retains its integrity and so is an excellent example of a structure erected purely for business purposes with rear Residence. It is placed right up to the front property line and takes advantage of the sloping terrain by the creation of basement storage space beneath the makai section. The building is determined by the

Matsujiro Fujino Property

Name of Property

Hawai'i, Hawai'i

County and State

topography: on the mauka side the foundation is poured concrete; the mid-portion recognizes the slope of the lot and is post-and-pier; and downslope the makai most portion allows enough vertical displacement for a concrete partial basement. It is single-wall construction, with double-hung as well as sliding wood-framed windows and totan roof—standard components that plantation-trained carpenters were familiar with. The façade also reflects period commercial design with large display windows and entrance alcoves. The Matsujiro Fujino Building retains its historical integrity in terms of location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling and association.

The Fujino Building, with its façade's display windows, recessed entries, and kick panels, as well as its bracketed cornice, and façade-length pent-roofed awning is typical of the wood commercial buildings of its period. It is also a good single-story example of the commercial form, with its false-front-like cornice providing a slightly more imposing view to the street. Its use of clapboard-clad vertical tongue-and-groove walls, while not as common as other materials, is a material and construction method typical of the period. Also, the incorporation of a residential space at the rear of the commercial establishments was a popular feature of small rural stores of the period. As such, the Fujino Building is immediately recognizable as a part of the early twentieth century genre of wood commercial buildings which almost exclusively graced the streets of Hawai'i's rural and plantation communities.

Outside of areas with fire safety ordinances, wood was the most common material used to construct commercial buildings in Hawai'i in the first four decades of the twentieth century. Honolulu passed fire district ordinances commencing in 1888, and Hilo in 1913. As a result, the preponderance of wood commercial buildings is found in Hawai'i's small towns and pre-date World War II. The wood buildings were usually one-to-two stories in height and often sat on concrete foundations. A number featured false fronts and often Italianate-inspired cornices with modillion-shaped brackets cap the buildings. The buildings were constructed primarily with vertical tongue-and-groove walls, although some of the earlier examples have shiplap siding. Frequently, pent-roofed awnings sheltered the sidewalks in front of the buildings. The façades contained doors to each retail store in the building and display windows. These openings could be either symmetrical or asymmetrical.

The Fujino Store Building represents a form once common in the Islands, which with the passage of time is becoming more and more difficult to find. Honoka'a presents the best conglomerate of such buildings on the island of Hawai'i, making the Fujino Property even more important for its contribution to this cohesive streetscape. The Fujino Residence, with its vertical tongue-and-groove walls and ceilings (and a few wood panel or canac ceilings), totan hipped roof, five-panel doors, and double-hung windows is also typical of the single-wall construction methods and materials used in Hawai'i during the 1920 and 1930s. It is a good example of the form, with its emphasis on cross ventilation.

Other examples of such wood commercial buildings do exist on the island of Hawai'i, although outside of Honoka'a, less than approximately forty examples of this building type can be found on the island and only two are listed in the Hawai'i Register of Historic Places and none on the National Register. In Hilo, the Burns Block of 1913 and the Spreckels Block of 1900 still stand, as do several buildings in Pāhoa. Along the forty-mile stretch from Hilo to Honoka‘a, only three or four such buildings still remain in Honomū, and one or two in Wailea, Pāpa‘ikou, and Pa‘auilo. On the Kona coast about a dozen small stores are scattered along the Māmalahoa Highway, including the Tomikawa Store in Hōlualoa which is listed in the Hawai‘i Register of Historic Places. In North Kohala, several buildings still stand in Hāwī and Kapa‘au, including the Nanbu Hotel, which is listed in the Hawai‘i Register of Historic Places.
