Narrative Description

Summary Paragraph

The Mahikoa House Property consists of (1) the main house built in 1937 for and used by the Kilauea Sugar Company’s Account Manager, (2) the adjacent garage that has been converted to a 2-bedroom residence, and (3) a more recent unit joined to the main house by an open carport.

This property is located on the Northside of Kuhio Highway, overlooking the Kilauea Stream. The houses are separated from the private driveway by a long Mock Orange Hedge and centered in the grassed lawns, with the back lawn sloping off the stream 200 feet to the north.

Narrative Description

The Main House was built in 1937 using the Hawaiian Plantation Style single wall construction method consisting of clear-heart vertical grain 1”x6” tongue and groove redwood applied vertically with a milled 1” batten resembling an “ogee” profile. The house is rectangular with several uncovered decks supported with the local river rock. The roof is the typical wide-hipped style seen in the Hawaiian Plantation Architectural Style.

The Main entry uses double French doors set between stone half columns with cement caps. The original windows are wood casement with divided panes. The exterior has the original siding, doors, windows, and river rock stoops. The original roof was replaced in 1992 after Hurricane Iniki with the same galvanized roofing.

The foundation is original post and pier. The piers consisting of a 7”x7” block set on top of a 16” x 16” base block.

The floors consist of the originally used 1”x3” clear fir, sanded and lightly stained. They remain in good condition with the kitchen floor being covered with a vinyl product. The bathroom floors have tile set over the existing original flooring. The living room has a concrete block fireplace directly across from French doors topped with the original Wooden Mantel. The ceiling was originally 1/2” canec with 1”x2” battens on 4-foot center running both ways. After Hurricane Iniki in 1992, the ceilings were redone with 1/2” drywall.

The Garage structure, built in 1937, echoes the style of the main house, using a coarser wood material for the exterior walls. The windows styles are mixed, using glass jalousies and double hung units. These have replaced the original double hung windows. The floor is slab on grade covered with an 8” grey tile in the main rooms. The bedrooms have been returned to the natural polished concrete.

The Additional Unit connected to the main house carport was built in 1988 using the same style as the main house.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Mahikoa House and Garage significance is connected to the Kilauea Sugar Company's history and the Kilauea town history.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

In the 1930's the plantation built many smaller houses in the community for the workers. The Mahikoa House represents one of the larger residences built for the plantation's management. Although many of the residences built for the plantation were constructed of local stone, the Mahikoa house structure is entirely of the vertical grained redwood with the stone being used as an accent in the columns and porch supports. In addition, the Mahikoa Houses are still seen in the original plantation settings with no modern or recent styles in close proximity.

The Architecture of the Mahikoa House remains an important example of the Hawaiian bungalow style. This is evident by the original materials used in the exterior and the site placement in the Kilauea town area. The Mahikoa House is an enlarged version of the typical bungalow style found in Hawaii. The building retains the overall style along with specific building materials.
