STATE GEARS UP FOR NEW MANAGEMENT ACTION AT KEALAKEKUA BAY STATE HISTORICAL PARK

Moratorium on kayaks, other vessels begins Jan. 2

HONOLULU -- The Department of Land and Natural Resources (DLNR) is taking action at Kealakekua Bay State Historical Park to improve the management, quality and sustainability of this heavily visited and significant natural and cultural resource by temporarily initiating a moratorium on the use of specific vessels in the water, starting Jan. 2, 2013.

"DLNR recognizes Kealakekua State Historical Park's deep cultural significance, the quality of its marine resources and the overall economic value to both the local community and the visitor industry," said William J. Aila Jr., DLNR chairperson. "This management action is needed to ensure the sustainability of this resource now and in the future."

The proliferation and use of unpermitted kayak rentals being conducted at Napoopoo have resulted in concerns about their subsequent impact on the general public's experience and the quality of resources in the water and at Kaawaloa Flats.

During the moratorium, there will be no operating, launching, transiting, beaching or landing of kayaks and other vessels from Napoopoo, within the waters of Kealakekua Bay, and at Kaawaloa Flats.

Also prohibited in the closed area will be other floatation devices and watercraft such as stand-up paddle boards, surfboards, and boogie boards. However, these items can still be used outside the closed area. Swimming and snorkeling are allowed in the bay, but no landing anywhere or entry at Kaawaloa will be permitted.

Specific vessels with existing permits will be allowed, and new permits for specific vessels --which will only be allowed to transit the water -- are being prepared.

Once certain planned management and regulatory action is completed, the launching and landing of kayaks at Napoopoo and Kaawaloa Flats will be allowed.

The Division of State Parks is developing an online permitting system that will allow permits for a maximum number of kayak rentals to be used by visitors per day, and will issue annual permits for residents' kayaks along with pre-existing authorized kayak tour operators with established patronage limits.

After the moratorium is lifted, all commercial activity, and recreational kayak and vessel use at Kealakekua Bay State Historical Park will require a permit.
